The "Climate Crisis" has been debunked several times by reputable scientists, yet Democrats and their appointed underlings keep lying to the American people in what can only be surmised as an attempt to control the population. The most recent act of blatant disregard for the truth is the proposed mandate sponsored by DNREC secretary Shaw Garvin, with the consent of Governor John Carney, is a perfect example of what can be expected by a bureaucratic appointee that has not been elected by the people.

Both the U.S. and Delaware constitution reserve the right to introduce legislation that will affect the lives of citizens and their rights, to the Legislature that has effectively been elected by and to represent the people. The mandate being proposed not only affects the lives of Delawareans, but free enterprise as well, in addition the mandate violates the constitution by imposing restrictions that circumvent the legislative process.

Clearly the citizens of Delaware are not in favor of this mandate and many have expressed their displeasure. The fact that the mandate is centered on air quality standards in Delaware is both inconsistent with the actual facts that Delaware fossil fuel vehicles are the cause of the air quality problems in Delaware, since it is proven that the air quality in Delaware is affected by air pollution arising from neighboring states due to Delaware's geographic location. It is also known that, again due to Delaware's geographic location, any contaminants originating in Delaware are blown out to sea by the prevailing winds. Therefore, the mandate will have little, if any affect on the air quality in Delaware.
