Considering all the data that shows the rush for electric vehicles is a poor decision and the fact that seniors on fixed incomes and lower income families can't afford even the cheapest EV, you continue to push this agenda. As a Delaware resident for 60 years I have never seen the focus so off course as it is now. Instead of pushing an agenda that right now is more detrimental than helpful, find a way to deal with the issues before setting dates. Inadequate charging infrastructure, grid overload/ power outages, high carbon grid profile, finite critical minerals and rare earth metals and the list goes on. We hear none of this addressed, just a date that you set with out the true feedback or concern of the people in this state.
