My question to you all is what fuel will be used to produce the electric for the cars to be charged? And how long does it take to fuel such a car? If you are on the road, how long a trip will be supported by one charge? Does it take into account the possible problem of more crime on those who are charging their cars or more theft of the converters that produce the energy? Converter's thefts are a big business, did you know? As an older lady it may be a bad thing to stand pumping the electric in the car. Can you assure my safety? Judy Adams
