I am opposed to the mandate regarding electric vehicles. The climate "change" reasons have proven wrong over and over again for decades, that are being used for low emission vehicles. I do many things to improve our environment, however, the child labor involved in mining the precious elements needed for each battery, the destruction of the earth this mining causes, the limit miles you can drive, and no plans of what will happen to the used batteries are all reasons I will not support this plan. The used batteries alone will be a toxic waste nightmare of how to best deal with them. Also, what about electric vehicles spontaneously combusting? No, I will not now or in the future purchase a low emissions/electric vehicle. It would be preferable if our legislative body and Governor Carney concentrate on returning America to energy independence. Respectfully, Marguerite T. Lenhardt, concerned citizen
