I think the low emissions objective is extremely unrealistic, as is Delaware following California's plan. The air pollution in Delaware comes, mainly, from surrounding states, so why should Delawareans pay the price for what other states are doing? The time frame for implementing this plan is unrealistic and it would put a tremendous financial burden on regular, average citizens of this state who are already feeling the stress of higher fuel prices, higher prices at the grocery stores, and higher energy bills. It would be nice if decisions made in this state benefited the law abiding citizens who live here instead of following extreme liberal states like California. Please start making decisions that benefit Delawareans.
