I object to Delaware adopting the California Advance Clean Car !! low emission vehicle program and having a full transition to electric vehicles by 2035 It is a restrictive policy and does not allow a choice to consumers who prefer to drive gas powered vehicles. There is no freedom to choose if the government is mandating this policy. Delaware has adopted clean air policies and have been successful in doing so. Also it is unrealistic to expect that any state who adopts these low emission standards for vehicles can handle the amount of strain it will put on power grids. States need to really understand that the grid handling all of these vehicles is a much larger problem than emissions themselves. Thank you
