I think that the EV plan makes a great deal of sense. this is not an overnight change but a gradual change that gives plenty of time for the EV's to go down in price, make them more advanced in many other ways and time for the charging infrastructure to become adequate and robust. if we don't make reasonable deadlines the switch to ev will take longer and could fall apart. our state is especially precarious to the problems climate could cause to our low-lying area. i work in social services and know that right now many/most cannot afford ev cars even with the 7500 rebate but in time all of this will change!
