Dear DNREC:

I would like to voice my strong support for your proposed new rules impacting new car sales and commonly referred to as the "EV mandate". The technology exists to substantially reduce the air pollution, both in the form of particulates and in the form of greenhouse gases, from personal vehicles. Surrounding states have already adopted similar rules. Cost to the consumer has become close to comparable between new polluting and new clean cars, especially if state and federal incentives are considered. Therefore, I see no reason not to require the stricter emissions standards. The state of Delaware will benefit from cleaner air and a market that does not send Delawareans out of state to buy state-of-the-art vehicles.

Thank you for your consideration.
