Governments cannot mandate physics. There is not enough electricity generated currently to support even a moderate growth in EV use. Wind and solar cannot add enough power no matter how many whales you're willing to kill. There are no plans to build new power plants. I don't give a damn what they do in California and I don't get to vote for representation in CA. It is illegitimate for Delaware politicians to delegate their authority to the legislators in CA or to bureaucratic agencies. You don't call it a mandate, but it is. You claim that it's market driven, but it is not. Stop stepping on the rights and proper processes of America.
