This regulation will cripple low and medium income families. I just looked at an electric vehicle comparable to my present one. Right from the door it is $10,000.00 more expensive just because it is electric. Second, it only goes 78 miles without having to be recharged. This means you would effectively have to stop every hour during a trip to recharge your vehicle. Third, the cost of the battery should it need to be replaced is exorbitant. It is also not covered as part of the extended warranty should you choose to buy one thereby crippling the vehicle if you don't have the money to pay for it. A great deal more research and improvements need to be accomplished before the government even dares to force people to buy these things.
