I am in favor of the gradual phase out of gas-powered cars. My husband and I purchased a Chevrolet Bolt a year ago and we absolutely love it. There is always fear of the unknown. When computers first came out people were afraid of them too. Don't force me to use one of those things! But people learned to depend on them, and I would bet very few people want to give up their computers now. People will soon feel that way about EVs. Once they try them (and there are enough chargers for convenient long-range travel), they won't have to be forced. But the legislation will put Delaware on equal footing and incentivize the transition.

Thank you.
