ZEV's are not zero emission vehicles. They cost more when new and why else would government have to give huge rebates for them? They require materials that the Biden administration has not allowed to be mined here and will surely require us to source from China, our adversary. There is no infrastructure available to recharge them and no plan to implement that. That coupled with the fact that this mandate has never been legislated at the federal level makes it a bad idea. Delaware copying California is nuts.
