Making batteries for electric vehicles creates more pollution than gas cars emit. How are the electric cars going to get charged up? Will we need more power plants that add to the pollution? I don't believe that we have the infrastructure to have all electric vehicles, hybrids maybe. In my opinion there is no way we can have enough charging stations to support all the cars on the road today. What about the problems associated with disposing of the electric car batteries? In my opinion having all electric vehicles only will make more problems not less. Please don't go down this path.
