

Subject: Electric Vehicle

Date: Wednesday, May 3, 2023 at 11:13:34 AM Eastern Daylight Time

From: MojoPaint Justbegin

To: HearingComments, DNREC (MailBox Resources)

I don't think this should be a government mandate.

If the EV's prove to be more efficient, cheaper and reliable people will make the choice on their own allowing for the infrastructure to develop at same pace.

COVID seems to have given the government the thought they can govern by mandates, all this does is insight discontent in the people and add fuel to these conspiracy groups.

This can be achieved by working with the manufacturers, if it's a good product and convenient people will buy it.

I don't appreciate being forced, this is a contradiction of my freedom of choice.

I also have a serious concern how we as a society will get all the rare earth minerals for the amount of cars. This mining goes against what we are trying to achieve.

Wouldn't it be better to develop mass transportation and eliminate a need for the majority of cars?

Monica Johnson
Sussex County

Sent from my Verizon, Samsung Galaxy smartphone
Get Outlook for Android