The Climate Joke is on us, the people of the United States as we are the one asked beyond or means to support such an undertaking. Even with Trillions of dollars if we lower the carbon to zero the rest of the world by then will have raised it past where it is not because of the costs they are not committed to. The earth in 300 years has gone up ONE degree and we should now be worried about 1/2 of a degree. Even the scientist that started Green Peace has said there is no need to panic as in the future non carbon fuels for energy will be available. China and India will still be burning coal no matter how many people but an EV and until new fuel is available we don't have to go broke to fill the pockets of the Chinese and the backers of the most expensive undertaking this world has ever seen. As for Delaware get out of this California dream state obligation. We are our own State be proud and lead the way as we have in the past with sane and practical government. Turn down this stupid mandate of banning the sale fosile fueled vehicles.
