Comments:

Respectfully, the mandating of EV purchases is very bad policy and bad legislation. EVs are NOT zero emission! There are massive emissions in their manufacturing, in the mining of the lithium and cobalt used for their batteries. There are ample documented instances of EVs catching fire and in some cases burning down residences. The electricity that they run on comes from someplace! It is an ignorant and false statement to make that these vehicles are "zero emission". If people want to chose to purchase an EV, then that should be their decision to make. It is absolutely wrong and bad policy to force others to purchase EVs by "banning the sale or registration of new fuel-powered light vehicles". Please do not make this mistake.
