Transitioning to electric vehicles is vital for reducing greenhouse gas emissions and creating new job opportunities. The Low Emission Vehicle Program can accelerate the switch to 100% emission-free vehicles, which will boost the economy and create new jobs in charging infrastructure and battery production. Electric vehicles emit less harmful pollutants than traditional gas-powered cars, improving public health and air quality. Additionally, they are cheaper to operate and maintain, making them a more cost-effective option for consumers. By transitioning to electric vehicles, we can reduce dependence on foreign oil and support a more sustainable energy system, while creating new job opportunities for a greener economy
