I disagree with the DE mandate on the low-emission vehicle program. No state should mandate what a person should purchase. The emissions mandate will not make a huge impact on the environment when the state is constantly cutting down trees and calling it progress. If the state can prove that cutting down trees is more effective on the environment than driving a gas vehicle, then I will be the first to enforce your low-emission vehicle program. Start your environmental impact by saving the trees and stop pushing something that in the end uses fossil fuels to operate effectively.
