2022-R-A-0011 I believe that this movement to all EVs is impossible in the proposed time frame. I also believe that our current electric grid cannot handle the load that charging these vehicles will put on it. There are many questions about the batteries and disposal of them after their life cycle has ended. It appears that it is very expensive to try to recycle the metals used in the batteries, so producers prefer to use new materials. So that is where no answers appear to be coming out about what will happen to them.
