All I hear about is go electric. But I do not hear a word about where all this electric is coming from. There is no such thing as a renewable energy, as hard as you try it does not exist. The power company can not generate enough electric to run all that exist now on hot days. Yet the building still going on so the demand is grouping all the time. And the power company is taking down one power plant in southern Delaware. One last thing what do you plan to do with the batteries from the cars as they die.
