This bill is an absolute necessity. If we and other states/organizations do not start to do things like this, we are guaranteed to leave our children and grandchildren a world that is totally unlivable. How could we look ourselves in the mirror with that kind of result? Oh, that's right, we probably won't be here!!! If everyone and every organization (including but certainly not limited to Delaware) continues the "slow to barely moving at all" progress in reducing carbon emissions, to project that we will doom our planet is not too extreme a likelihood. Won't it be ironic when the die is finally cast and the planet has become unlivable, that we'll inevitably say "well you know we should have acted sooner and more strongly?" Duh.
