I do not want to have a electric vehicle mandate in Delaware. With all the coming changes in technology; what is know today can become obsolete next month. Furthermore, it is clear that the power grid requirements are not and will not be to meet the new demand without expensive upgrades . And who will be paying for these upgrades? What is going to be does with expired battery's ? What will be the environmental impact of the expired battery's? This is something which should be by lawmakers and not appointed committees. We are rushing to judgement here. Watching California falling apart at the seems and going deeper into debt is not a governing model that Delaware should be following. Is there any contingency plan if a war breaks out in the world?
