I do not think this mandate should pass. I don't want an EV - the cars, themselves, are too expensive, not enough charging stations in Delaware, too expensive to add a charging station to our home, EVs take too long to charge, and I don't think the grid can handle the additional demand. Why are we following California laws? California is losing residents, it is the most expensive state to live in, and they are continuously having blackouts due to electric demand. The residents of Delaware should be able to decide what type of vehicle they want to buy.
