Hello. I am taking time out of my busy schedule to write my opinion on the electric vehicle mandate. I am not against people owning a electric vehicle if they so choose. I have actually considered one myself as I drive about 2 hours daily. However more often than not I am driving a f150 or bigger sometimes a diesel truck and almost daily pulling a trailer of some sort with construction equipment or supplies. While I agree we need to take care of the earth God has given us I also realize that electric is not a powerful enough alternative for my situation and really in the end of the day not much cleaner than fossil fuels by the time you consider the extreme mining process for the battery and electricity itself is not necessarily clean either. Until we find a better more powerful more reliable solution this eliminating gas and diesel will not work. Not to mention our electric grid will not be able to handle this extreme amount of cars. I support choice not forced.
