Comments:

I worked on the stratospheric ozone issue and climate change while at DuPont, so I know that transportation is the worst contributor to smog and climate change from a consumer standpoint. Fully agree that we need to move in this direction. But we need an orderly transition, stable grid for electricity supply, plenty of charging stations/infrastructure that benefits everyone. And, to get everyone on board, we need cars that can charge faster, hold the charge for more miles and cost less. I have a gas hybrid that gets 500 miles a tank. We need to make sure we have enough time to do all of this and really educate everyone or this will fail.
