The program to limit sales of vehicles in the state of Delaware represents a greater loss of freedom from state control. Cars and trucks are a very important part of moving in and around Delaware. People deserve the choice of whatever fits the needs of the family or business involved.

Watching the decline of California, the loss of freedom and the decline the citizens' welfare as well as the decline in business, Delaware should not follow the follies that drives that state into the ground.

There is also the issue of generating enough electricity to keep the state moving and doing business with this mandate. Certainly the unintended consequences of this action have not been carefully considered.

Sincerely

Henry R. Nyce
