I am concerned about this law because it represents something that a few citizens of the United States want and the vast majority, I would venture to say, do not. It feels much the same as the mask mandates and the "sheltering in place"; the forcing of the American people to do what the government wants us to do whether it is good for us or not. It is too bad we have come to this, but I am grateful for this forum to express how I see things. It would be wonderful if we knew how the energy to power the electric cars would be generated. Where do the batteries come from? Are they prone to problems that would cause the average retired person to choose between buying their medications, food, or buying a fix on their car? Where do old batteries go? Who gets rich from this electric law? Is our government concerned about other countries in the world that contribute far more to the damage in our atmosphere than Americans do? If not, why not? Is anyone else doing their part? Finally, are there any Christian lawmakers speaking up for the fact that "The Earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof."? Is our government so focused on absolute power (corrupting absolutely) and making money for a few, they have lost sight of the truth of the universe...That God is in charge, and He will make a new Earth...soon? Does anyone in our Delaware lawmaking body want to speak up for that? I know we must keep being godly while we wait, but I feel like someone needs to be like William Wilberforce speaking out against slavery in Parliamentthis forcing of the people to accept this governmental "blind eye" to the "inevitable" instead of calling it WRONG! To force this on a society poorly prepared to deal with it is wrong for so many reasons. Thank you.
