I vote No to the EV mandate solely because it will pollute in a more harmful way on a local level. Accelerated tire wear, of 2 to 3 times current, from the EV's weight leads to the increased landfill disposal area issues. Polluting waterways, the creatures that inhabit them as well as Delawareans who swim in them will ingest the increased chemicals of tire wear washed from the roadways. California has this problem now as noted in its salmon and agriculture industries which will be exacerbated this year by their rainfall, snow melt and continued flooding.

Roadway, bridge and parking structure damage from added excessive weights.

Disposal of depleted batteries? Cleaning of manufacturing sites?

Unaffordable car cost?

Unaffordable insurance cost?

Lack of grid capacity?

Do cars from other visiting states continue the problem you are trying to fix, as they outnumber locals most of the time?

Does the winds that blow from out of state bring with it the pollution of manufacturing, electric generation, car exhaust and ...
