Being employed by a local fuel company these changes are concerning to me, what is going to happen to my job, my family, my financial commitments? Is there going to be assistance available to upgrade/install electrical outlets to power EV's? How many electricians are currently licensed in the state to install this type of system? Not every electrician can install a generator. Would this require a different type of certification? Are building code requirements going to change to ensure that new homes have these EV outlets installed?
