As a life-long resident of Delaware, I must voice my objection to this proposal. Our NATIONAL electrical grid has for years, been cited as inadequate & antiquated. Now you want to tie citizens' ability to travel freely to access to a fragile network, one our own military intelligence notes is at severe risk of a EMP attack? One even a primitive hostile adversary could pull off & cripple our electrical grid, and you want to tie our ability to move to it, further straining its already-borderline functional obsolescence? No thanks. While well-intended, it's premature for existing infrastructure.
