I speak as a 42 year veteran of the auto industry. New technologies take time to emerge. Electric vehicles still have a host of problems (range, reliability, repair shops needing to catch up on how to repair them, not to mention the cost of a battery once the vehicle is out of warranty) I live in Sussex county where there are not a whole lot of charging stations. Emissions have improved significantly over the last few decades for internal combustion engines. This should be a choice for the consumer to make, not a mandate by beaurocrats.
