How can anyone buy an electric car without having their own quick charging station? The cost is too much and those that are concerned about the environment can wonder how much pollution is generated from making and disposing of the battery. How much time will it add to a vacation trip to have to stop and charge. How long will the battery last with the A/C running? Is there a better way to power cars? When a system is up and running and proven to work, is when I would consider in putting forth the money to buy a vehicle other than gas powered. Are we the only nation doing this? If the rest of the planet is using all fossil fuels is our contribution worth the expense?
