EV'S will not be ready for use until battery tech can support a 5 minute 90percent charge and get 400 miles to a single charger. Additionally, they must be capable of using standard outlet to be charged at Home. Engineers need time to innovate and create the new solutions needed for this technology, until then let's wait until we have everything in place before we start Mass producing EV'S. Innocence I'm against any of the forced woke ideology and ideas to be put upon the greater population.
