This is the written "Mission" of DNREC: "The Department of Natural Resources and Environmental Control (DNREC) envisions a Delaware that offers a healthy environment where people embrace a commitment to the protection, enhancement and enjoyment of the environment in their daily lives; where Delawareans' stewardship of natural resources ensures the sustainability of these resources for the appreciation and enjoyment of future generations; and where people recognize that a healthy environment and a strong economy support one another." I object to the US Wind project as it goes against the stated mission of stewardship of natural resources. With the latest debacle in Nantucket of a blade failure, coupled with the use of towers taller than have ever been tested or used anywhere on the globe, it is unconscionable that the State would approve this project. Delaware has been "all in" without much thought or care as to the many negative aspects and unknowns of this project. Not to mention that this project will primarily serve Maryland energy needs, not Delaware's. It is beyond belief that the State of Delaware would risk our pristine beaches, our very important tourism revenue, our US defense systems (radar), the commercial fishing industry, the health of marine mammals and other potentially disastrous effects. State government exists to serve the citizens and taxpayers of Delaware. This project does the exact opposite.
