Comments:

The safety of our marine life as well as the safety of personel who will maintain the equipment. I was informed the off shore wind project is less cost effective with lower regulations regarding the location. It is my understanding that electricity naturally produces heat. Are there studies that prove no increase in Ocean temp or effect to the coral reef system? Also what potential damage can be done with the material that happens to fall into water and how does that effect our marine life. In my opinion there is alot more land that instead of being developed for residential, the county and state should find alternative wind farm solutions.
