Hello,

I am emailing with regards to the plans for Project Washington in the Delaware Watershed. This massive AI data center does indeed meet the standard for heavy industry do to the consumption of power, water, and the pollution it causes in terms of the [REDACTED]
[REDACTED]

If they want AI data centers, then they need to be required to power them with renewable energy. Simple as that. They should also be required to use a finite amount of water that is recycled and processed through thermal exchanges to both cool and produce electricity from the heat. These data centers don't have to be massive drains on the environment. We are just choosing to let them. [REDACTED]
