I am contacting you regarding Project Washington, which aims to put a huge data center within Delaware's coastal zone. This building will use 250 diesel generators. The project clearly violates the Coastal Zone Act, which protects our coast for recreation and tourism. The Coastal Zone Act allows exceptions, but this data center does not fit within those because it is not a manufacturing facility, and it is not a grandfathered site. This proposed center will use massive amounts of energy, and harm the environment with its backup generators. Additionally, it does not meet requirements for proof that the site can withstand sea level rise and coastal permits, which could potentially stick Delaware with a huge clean up bill.

Project Washington violates the Coastal Zone Act. Please protect Delaware families and tell them "no".
