To whom it may concern,

I have not historically been the type of person to write emails to council people, board members, DNREC, etc but as the state of the country continues to deteriorate I am seeing an increasing need to speak up, for whatever it is worth, especially on local matters. I am a citizen, homeowner, and employee of [REDACTED]. I was born and raised here, and my husband and I have a family of our own here. I've always loved Delaware and feel pride in being a lifetime resident. It's hard to ignore that the landscape has changed and continues to change, with more construction every day and less open space, trees, wildlife in general, but as I continue to read about proposed data centers in the area I feel the need to be vocal.

Not big on social media, my husband often sends links to me regarding matters he feels I should be informed about. Recently, he sent me a few lengthy videos of residents in a southern state feeling the very detrimental effects of living near a data center. Since viewing these I have felt that this is an inevitable shift in our country and that, in time, one (or more) may come to Delaware. There are numerous negative repercussions of building data centers in a town and I hope these are taken into consideration during the decision-making process. There are countless videos and articles about already-constructed data centers and how they negatively impact communities. It's really quite scary to think these centers could start landing in our backyards, polluting the water, wreaking havoc on wildlife/ecosystems, emitting toxins and noise, side-stepping normal processes for various aspects of construction, draining water and electricity, and the list goes on.

As a proud Delawarean and [REDACTED] I cannot continue to standby and watch the conditions around me deteriorate without saying something. [REDACTED]
