Please be advised that I, and my husband, Martin Dusbiber, very strongly oppose your proposed adoption of California's zero-emission vehicle standards. We are not California, we do not want to be California that has some of the most senseless laws in the country. The fact that you are "mandating" these standards shows how little regard you have for the people of Delaware. I have not talked to one person and have read many more comments that indicate that the people of this state are not in favor of this mandate. It will have a negative impact on the economy of this state; it will put people out of business; it will put farmers out of business; it will make it impossible for many people to afford to buy vehicles, and will put a huge economic burden on those residents who do not live near charging stations. The fact that the state is installing 14 throughout the state at this time is almost laughable. There are many more reasons this is a bad, bad idea which do not need to be repeated here because I am quite sure you know what they are. My most pressing question is why can the governor and one department decide to do this to the people of a state who are overall against it. Answer: Because you think you can!

Put our votes in the NO column, please.
