Unless a fuel other than electric is used banning gas vehicles will not work. Much of the present electric power produced in Delaware at the present time comes from fossil fuel. The more electric vehicles the more electric has to be generated.
People will buy fossil fuel vehicles from other states.
It's very good to greatly lower fossil fuel emissions; perhaps by 2035 there will be very workable ways to limit gas vehicles.
Now in 2022 too many who have to think of not using a gas powered vehicle don't want that to happen. When better working methods are in place then talk about this.
