Kyle:
I listened to all of the background information that was provided and I have a few questions as follows:
1- are er going to get rid of I 95 in Delaware- my guess is no- if the people along 95 are effective at a disproportionate rate - should we not do something for them- since you will not stop the interstate traffic which is the disproportionate amount of polluters?
2- if our area of Delaware does not have the problem would you exclude that area from the prohibition?
3- I am sure that what was presented is probably true but there doesnot seem to be any information presented on the adverse effects- how are batteries recycled, why are we sourcing all of the batteries from China? What happens should China slow or stop allowing the raw materials? Who is going to pay for the increased cost of my buying an electric versus combustion engine vehicle- I can't afford the 15-20% for an electric vehicle-
4- will all of the charging station be fueled by green energy only?
5- what part of Delaware matches California where you obtained all of the benefits from?
Can you please provide fill in some answers so that I can make a balanced informed decision.

Sincerely, Jim Noto
