Dear Sir,
I am quite concerned about the proposed state regulations that seek a ban on the sale of new gasoline and diesel vehicles.
I understand this would not take effect for several years, but I am not into the government restricting what I can drive.
Obviously, this will affect many folks and I am not sure that everyone has the means to buy electric vehicles. This will have dire consequences on our electric grid as well.
Shouldn't the concern be, that we should have electricity to run our homes. We do not live in California, and I do not feel the need to be living by their standards. Not interested in rolling blackouts, and if for some reason we had to evacuate the lower slower of Delaware, my gas powered vehicle will not run out of power.
I am only one person, but everyone that I have spoke with, feels the same way.
Thank you.
