We are NOT California!

I happen to own a PHEV vehicle which I bought 2 years ago and average about 84 mpg as a result. I b ough the car as a result of my needing one big enough to transport my electric trike (for my disability.) This vehicle suits me, but it will not suit others. Until DE and other states have a suitable Electric Charging Network it is ludicrous to impose such a mandate. If better and less expensive electric vehicles and better charging situations become available, then a more natural transition will occur. I am sick of government mandates, especially if they are copied from CA. My CA born and raised wife just hates what her naïve state has become.
