Dear Governor Carney,
I would like to express my disapproval of your EV mandate proposal modeled after the California plan. This technology is no where near ready for generalized implementation and the thought of it being forced on the population is unacceptable and un-American! This mandate has not been well thought out as far as practical considerations are concerned. The infrastructure is not in place to handle this transition as yet and the long term consequences of the technology are yet to be understood. The costs associated with use of the electric vehicle are prohibitive for many residents, not to mention the availability of charging stations for those living in apartments or other multi-residential units.
I am sure that your intentions are good but I believe that the transition should be more gradual, incorporate hybrid vehicles and allow the process to develop without being forced. Automakers have made significant improvements over the years to maximize fuel efficiency and decrease emissions. The government should allow private industry to continue to innovate and bring new technologies forward. The public would be able to respond to and accept these modifications over time and encourage acceptance and compliance.
The energy needs of our population are only going to increase with time and it is certainly more advisable to embrace all forms of energy generation. Your plan is impractical, forced, tyrannical and short sighted. Those in government should learn to trust their constituents and the marketplace and let these "advancements" find their place in their own time.
If anything was learned from the Covid pandemic, the public does not want governmental mandates. Let people make their own choices and decisions and stop dictating how we should run our own lives and households and finances.
