Dear Sir,

What a way to keep the poor trapped at home, unable to work, to even provide a way to bring food to their children. We are not California, maybe you and your crew should move?

Delaware is small. There is not even enough space to house all of the charging stations that will be required.

We are currently meeting air quality standards.

I don't personally know a single person who thinks this lunacy is a good idea. Regular people. Working people. Senior citizens.

How much is this endeavor even going to cost? I have heard nothing about that.

How much to get my house fitted for a charging station? Obviously, the plan is to outfit us all for free since it is being forced on us, right?

The cobalt needed for the batteries-you know that child labor digs all of that up. Sure, you do.

You and the rest have no care, no compassion for people. That is clear.

I could go on and on, but I have got to go work so I can eat.

Not happily,

George S. Pierson
