Hello and good afternoon.

I want to start off by saying that there is no such thing as a zero emission vehicle and that term is therefore an absurdity on its face. The resources used to make these vehicles, as well as, the power needed to recharge them are not zero emissions. So what is the definition of a zero emissions vehicle?

Secondly, why does the government feel the need to constantly control people by dictating what they can and cannot buy. I'm sure the poorest among our citizenry will be able to comply with this given the added costs associated with these vehicles Or will there be a carve out specifically allowing the poor to continue to run their current vehicles they can afford? Or maybe a cash handout by the state of Delaware as encouragement will be the answer?

It is not the role of government to decide winners and losers in any market, whether that market be automobiles or housing. I ask you to NOT amend the Delaware code in question and leave us, the citizens, the ability to make choices that work best for ourselves and our families.
